

Tax Services for International Employees

Weaver can help make overseas assignments easier for employees and less costly for employers.

Global Mobility and the Tax Impact

Relocating employees, either into or out of the United States, triggers complex tax issues for both organizations and their expatriate employees.

For companies providing tax equalization reimbursements to employees, many factors must be considered, such as the taxability of company stock options and of foreign allowances such as cost-of-living, housing, transportation and relocation allowances.

Potential impacts reach beyond the company's tax bill. Uncertainty and stress felt by employees can affect performance and willingness to accept important global assignments. But proper planning and knowledgeable assistance can make the process easier and less costly for everyone.

Managing Complexity

Weaver helps companies and employees make sense of varying taxes and filing requirements anywhere in the world.

For Employers

Managing the complex tax requirements of expatriate employees is a key piece of the total benefit package offered by an organization. We compile information employers need to create traveler packages, and then manage the reporting and filing requirements on behalf of expatriates. Weaver calculates hypothetical tax projections for tax equalization to help prevent unpleasant year-end surprises.

Our professionals are focused on complex international issues and stay current on the ever-shifting tax codes in the U.S. and foreign countries to keep companies and their employees informed about the latest tax requirements.

For Employees

Supporting expatriate employees is instrumental to the success of international projects. Our experienced, multilingual professionals provide customized tax orientations to summarize the tax implications of employee assignments and to assist employees in completing their personal tax returns.
